As Hickey Smith's Legal Operations Partner, Christian Dodd is responsible for the design, development, implementation and execution of the firm's unique legal services delivery model. He oversees the development, testing and maintenance of the firm's proprietary legal workflows, checklists, automated document assembly templates and case assessment tool. He also oversees the identification, collection and analysis of matter-specific data collected throughout the lifecycle of each firm matter. This data is utilized for continuous process improvement and to provide actionable business insight to firm clients.

Prior to joining Hickey Smith, Christian practiced law in the large law firm environment, most recently as a Partner with Akerman LLP, and prior to that with Winston & Strawn. His practice is focused on complex commercial and business litigation, intellectual property matters, government investigations and electronic discovery and information governance issues. Christian's experience covers a broad spectrum ranging from simple contract and B2B disputes to consolidated multi-district litigation and bet-the-company litigation. He has extensive experience managing the electronic discovery lifecycle in the context of both small- and large-scale litigation and government investigations. Christian draws on this experience to devise strategies and legal workflow processes to improve efficiencies and reduce the costs of litigation.
