Korri Abrams Frampton serves as Senior Counsel for Hickey Smith and brings over twenty years of legal experience to the firm. Skilled in torts, arbitration, trial practice, and legal writing, she also has substantial experience in all aspects of defense litigation. Korri received her Juris Doctorate from Syracuse University College of Law, graduating Magna Cum Laude, and served as the editor of the Survey of New York Law for the Syracuse Law Review. Prior to attending law school, Korri was a New York State, Licensed Insurance Broker, (Property & Casualty and Life, Accident & Health), which equips her with the unique ability to combine legal expertise with extensive knowledge of the insurance industry and regulations, and provide a broad business perspective on a myriad of issues.

Korri began her legal career representing clients in a variety of civil litigations, and has conducted extensive factual and legal research regarding insurance fraud, with a concentration in no-fault. Korri's expansive knowledge of insurance law led to many successful trials and arbitration for bodily injury action cases, handling each case from inception to trial. She has prepared multiple declaratory judgments, arbitration contentions, and successful appellate briefs.

Experienced in managing diverse case-loads, Korri handles complex, critical disputes with ease. Her extensive background in insurance litigation and regulations enables her to use her relevant knowledge and leadership to exceed clients' expectations.
